SENATE GETS 32 BILLION WAR MEASURE

Bill Passes House Without Dissenting Vote After Brief Debate.

TOTAL BREAKS RECORD

Senate Unanimously Approves Deficiency Bill Including Giant Defense Fund.

WASHINGTON — A record-smashing $32,072,901,900 war appropriation moved to the senate today with a 371 to 0 endorsement by the house under committee warning that supplies must be ready against a supreme Axis offensive this spring.

House appropriations committee members, introducing the measure yesterday, spoke against a background of information furnished privately by high ranking army officials and urged quick action on the bill, which includes outlays for transportation and other immediate items as well as for long range production. The house passed the bill with only four hours debate.

With similar unanimity yesterday the senate passed a voice vote a $163,806,854 deficiency measure, including $100,000,000 for civilian defense against air raids, and returned it to the house for action on minor amendments.

In that bill, the senate left intact house restrictions against use of any part of the protection fund for "fan dancing, street shows or other public entertainment" or for the treasury's $80,000 Donald Duck income-tax-cartoon film.

The big war fund carried $22,888,901,900 for the war department, mostly for ordnance and expediting production, with a provision that half of this could go for lend-lease aid.

It also included a $5,430,000,000 specific item for lend-lease, raising the total approved separately for such purpose to date to more than $17,000,000,000.

Another big item was $3,852,000,000 to carry forward the merchant marine program, the goal of which now is 2,877 ships—or two a day—at a total cost of $6,704,464,056. The schedule this year calls for 786 cargo ships.

Shortly before passage, the house rejected by a standing vote of 98 to 38 an amendment by Rep. Smith (D-Va.) which would have banned the closed shop in industry, and jurisdictional and sympathy strikes.

Ship That Japs 'Destroyed' Sails To United States

HONOLULU—(U.P.)—The 1,500-ton destroyer Shaw, which the Japanese "destroyed" in their sneak attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, has reached the United States under her own power for reconditioning, the navy disclosed today.

The Shaw, which was in drydock when the Japanese attacked, was hit repeatedly by bombs, the navy said, one of which exploded her magazines and wrecked her forward section.

An emergency bow was constructed to enable the Shaw to reach a west coast port, it was announced.

The Shaw was launched in 1935 at the Philadelphia navy yard. She was the second destroyer of that name. The first was cut in two by the British troopship Aquitania in an English channel fog in 1918, but its commander, now Vice-Admiral William A. Glassford, sailed the after part of the ship to Portland, England, 50 miles away, receiving the navy cross for the feat. A new bow was constructed and the first Shaw served with the fleet until 1928.

Mansfield Relays Cancelled After Discovery of North Central Association Curb on Inter-State Competition

AFTER 15 years of colorful and record-setting history, in which it grew to the largest high school track meet in the nation, the Mansfield Relays today had come to the end of the trail.

At a meeting yesterday afternoon, attended by city school board members, officials, Athletic Director Harry Mehock, founder of the Relays, and members of the Mansfield citizens' committee, it was decided to call off the schoolboy track classic this year.

Directly responsible for the decision was a ruling passed a year ago by the North Central association of colleges and secondary schools the significance of which came to the attention of Relays and school officials only within the past week.

In effect, the ruling forbids athletes from any out-of-state school from coming to the Relays.

Actually, it forbids trips of more than 75 miles for competition that involves crossing a state line, though it does not forbid intra-state competition no matter what the distance travelled.

Hence Cleveland schools could go to Cincinnati to compete, a distance of about 250 miles, but a Pittsburgh school could not come to Mansfield to compete though the trip would not involve as great a distance.

The North Central ban affects all types of inter-state competition—music, speech and others—as well as athletic.

Because of its central location in Ohio,

CHURCH BLAZE STRIKES CHORD OF SYMPATHY

Congregationalists Get Eleven Offers To Use Buildings For Worship Services.

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

Touched by the passing of a house of worship that was a deep part of its daily life and time-honored feature of its physical appearance, Mansfield today extended its sympathy and offered its aid to the congregation of the First Congregational church.

Early yesterday the 69-year-old church building was swept by the city's most disastrous fire in 13 years, with a loss estimated by church officials at $225,000.

Before nightfall, while smoke still rose from the ruins, the congregation of the church had received offers from 11 other churches and institutions to use their building facilities. Even while the blaze swept through the church, the first such offer came from Grace Episcopal church.

During the day similar offers came from seven other churches—the First Presbyterian, First Methodist, First Christian, First Lutheran, Mayflower Congregational, Central Methodist, and Park Avenue Baptist.

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., too, offered the congregation use of its building facilities, and Division Manager Frank Harpster of Warner Brothers offered the use of either the Ohio or Madison theaters.

From these and many others came expressions of sympathy. Moved by the city's quick response, Rev. Peter Young, pastor of the church, said in behalf of his congregation:

"As minister of the First Congregational church I speak for all members of the parish in saying we are profoundly grateful to the people of Mansfield and their institutions for their sincere expressions of sympathy in the loss of our church building.

Truck and City Officials--But No Mayor

City officials inspected a new fire truck, manufactured for delivery to the city of St. Mary's today, as a step in the city's fire protection improvement program, provided for by the passage of a special tax levy in last November's election. Shown looking over the truck are, left to right, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton, L. B. Hamilton, chairman of the citizens' committee that campaigned for the levy, and Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger. Mayor W. J. Locke refused to pose for the camera, despite an effort by Hamilton to include him in the group.

Strides Into City Hall After Turning Down Request That He Appear In Fire Truck Photo.

Arrival on the scene of a News-Journal camera this morning cut short Mayor W. J. Locke's inspection of a new fire truck, being shown to city officials.

The truck, being delivered to the city of St. Marys, was in front of the city building. Its makers, the Mack Truck company, brought it here because the city is contemplating the purchase of additional fire equipment.

City officials were grouped about the truck, but when the photographer sought to arrange a picture, Mayor Locke refused to pose, and strode hurriedly into the building.

Two other city officials, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton and Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger, were already in place, along with L. B. Hamilton, chairman of the citizens tax committee, which waged a successful campaign for a fire department tax levy in last fall's election.

The mayor explained that he had no wish to "embarrass" the reporter who asked that he

Nimble Fingers of Pianist Brailowsky Thrill 1,250

By KEN WOODMAN

After he had raised an audience of 1250 people to exuberant enthusiasm in the third Civic Music concert of the season at Senior high school auditorium last night and had kept his auditors keenly interested for nearly two hours, Alexander Brailowsky, pianist, did the right thing.

He returned to the piano and played as encores the four numbers that probably everyone wanted to hear. The numbers were the Paganini-Liszt Etude, Chopin's "Black Key" Etude and "Minute" Waltz, and the Rachmaninoff Prelude in G minor.

His program got off to its real start with the second number, Scarlatti's melodious and sprightly Pastorale and Capriccio. He played the Scarlatti composition at a nimble clip that took the breath of many listeners who have heard it again and again as just a pretty little piece of music, and yet Brailowsky read into it a fine sense of sentiment.

Later—referring to his reputation as an amateur mathematician—he said:

"A mathematician? Probably, but I never approach my music with any mathematical attitude. My approach is purely instinctive."

There was certainly a fine balance between the mathematician and the inspirationalist in the artist's sense of rhythm, evident throughout the entire program.

Nowhere was it more evident

BUTLER BOARD FAILS TO ACT ON 'MISCONDUCT'

Four School Officials Meet on Weekley Case; Robinson Wants Action Soon.

Because one member of the Butler village school board was not officially notified of a meeting yesterday afternoon at Prosecutor Harold Lutz' office in Mansfield, the board was unable to take any official action on "misconduct" charges against Supt. of Schools Willard S. Weekley, a member of the board said today.

Although it was understood the meeting was called to discuss procedure in dismissing the charges against Weekley, a board spokesman said today that it was unlikely any action will be taken this week. Prosecutor Lutz could not be reached today for comment on the meeting.

Four of the five members of the board were present at yesterday's session. Wade Forbes, who has backed the superintendent through the school strike and dispute over the charges against him, did not attend. He said later he had not been informed officially of the meeting.

Despite rumors that the charges might be dismissed, Boyd Robinson, county superintendent of schools, said today he favored "getting this settled now."

Robinson pointed out that there was no point in letting the dispute carry over until the end of the school term, since it was likely that it will have to be decided then anyway.

Weekley filed a request for a public hearing of the charges against him with the board Monday night. Members said today that no date has been set for the hearing.

The superintendent was placed under a 10-day suspension by the board on Feb. 4 and then re-instated when pupils went on a protest strike and scores of parents and pupils met at the courthouse in Mansfield to demand that Weekley be permitted to return as head of the schools.

MAYRIS QUITS

Resigns From OCD 'To Prevent Further Controversy.'

PHILADELPHIA—(U.P.)—Mayris chaney, dancing friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose appointment to a $4,600 a year position in the civilian defense program aroused severe criticism in congress, resigned today.

Miss Chaney offered her resignation to Dean James Landis, OCD director. She had been serving as director of the children's welfare division.

She told Landis that her resignation was intended to halt further controversy. She explained that she had not planned introduction of fan dancing to children, as insinuated by congressional speeches, and that she wanted only to help prepare children for possible air raids.

FOUND DEAD ON LAWN AT HOME

Mansfielder Died of Heart Attack, Exposure, Coroner Says.

George Walters, 50, who was found dead early today on the lawn at his home in Lincoln Heights, died of a heart attack and exposure, Coroner L. B. McCullough said.

Walters' body was found by a neighbor who notified Sheriff Frank E. Robinson. Deputy Sheriff Glenn Freeman said the body was found near the house. Walters was without a coat when he was stricken, Freeman said. Apparently he had been dead several hours, officers added.

Walters formerly was employed by the Ohio Brass company. The body was taken to the Wappner Funeral home pending completion of funeral arrangements. Attempts were being made to contact relatives. Authorities said they were unable to learn whether Walters had any relatives in Mansfield.

Cross Thailand Border; Java Faces Crisis

Van Moot Appeals to United Nations to Take Offensive as Enemy Holds Off From Javanese Assault; U. S. Pilots Bag Four Planes In Sumatra.

(By Associated Press)

With "zero hour" near in the battle for Java, Lieut.-Gov. Hubertus Van Mook of the Dutch East Indies appealed to the United Nations today to take the offensive, search out the enemy and fight, or risk losing the war.

Even as Van Mook spoke, the all-India radio broadcast unconfirmed reports that Chinese troops had invaded Japanese-dominated Thailand, striking the first land counter blow by the United Nations since the war began Dec. 7.

Thailand was a major jumping-off point for the Japanese invasions of Malaya and Burma.

The all-India broadcast, quoting a Rangoon communique, said that according to "a report as yet unconfirmed," Chinese troops on the north Burma front had crossed the Thailand border and were battling toward Chiengmai, 300 miles north of Bangkok, the Thai capital.

"The Japanese are using ships recklessly. I think we could emulate them," Van Mook said, arriving in Sydney, Australia, from the United States where he conferred with officials in Washington.

"We'll fight in the Indies as long as humanly possible," he said, but warned that a policy of "constantly retiring to prepared positions could lead to a position in which the Allies might lose the war."

Japan's invasion hordes still held off from a direct assault on Java, densely-populated heart of the Indies, four days after striking into nearby lower Sumatra with parachute troops and seaborne reinforcements.

Seizing the initiative, American fighter planes helped keep the invaders at bay.

United Nations headquarters said American pilots aiding in the defense of Java attacked a Japanese-held airdrome in lower Sumatra and shot down four enemy planes without loss to themselves. Dutch bombers shot down two more.

Five Japanese bombers were shot down in an attack on the big Allied naval base at Soerabaja, Java, this morning, it was announced.

A combined American-Dutch bomber force sank a large Japanese transport, scored hits on two others and rained havoc on a fleet of troop-laden barges.

N. E. I. headquarters said Dutch troops were still fighting grimly against Japanese forces in Borneo just above Java, but acknowledged that "fighting has almost come to an end" on the Japanese-overrun Minahassa peninsula in northeast Celebes island.

In the Philippines, a bulletin from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters indicated that Japanese troops had started their long-expected assault in force against American and Filipino defenders of Batan peninsula.

The communique reported increased enemy activity, much heavier Japanese artillery fire and the landing of Japanese reinforcements in Subic bay, just north of Batan.

FORTRESS: Hawaii Ready and Eager for Onslaught By Japs

(By United Press)

SOMEWHERE IN OAHU ISLAND—Hawaii has become a fortress after a little more than two months of war and its troops, drawn from all over the United States and reinforced by Hawaiian national guardsmen, are not only eager but ready to meet the Japanese.

From the famed beaches of this island to the mountains, the United States army has prepared and is still preparing defenses which already make it certain that Hawaii will be no Singapore.

It is possible to reveal that secret airdromes have been constructed and are ready.

There are pill boxes on the beaches and on country estates. There are artillery emplacements at all key points, commanding the approaches to possible invasion points. There are infantrymen and artillery men back in the mountains who will remain there for the duration awaiting an attack.

It was plainly evident that the army is continuing to expand the air force in Hawaii and does not intend to be caught again, as it was Dec. 7, with planes concentrated at a few fields.

In the Oahu mountains artillery has now been placed in concealed positions so it commands the coast line.

Col. Rox H. Donaldson directed the fire of three widely separated batteries as I watched. They landed their shells in a small area of the ocean a few thousand yards off shore, where enemy landing

HINT: Admiralty Tips Plan To Thwart Drive Upon Turkey

(By Associated Press)

A hint that Britain may be heavily reinforcing her armies in the middle east, possibly to combat a German thrust into Turkey this spring, was dropped by the London admiralty today with the disclosure that "certain convoys" had been safely escorted through the Mediterranean.

The admiralty said the operations, apparently on a big scale, were carried out between Feb. 13 and 16 with the loss of only two merchant craft.

"The enemy made great efforts to inflict serious loss and published the usual exaggerated claims," an admiralty communique said.

The point of reinforcement was not specified. An Italian communique asserted Monday that a British destroyer and seven merchant ships had been sunk out of a big convoy en route from Alexandria, Egypt, to the bomb-battered island of Malta, about midway between the tie of the Italian boot and Libya, North Africa.

On Saturday, a German communique said Nazi planes sank a British destroyer and a 10,000-ton merchantman in a convoy north of Tobruk, Libya.

Recent dispatches from the Balkans have told of large number of German troops massing in Bulgaria, Greece and Greek islands — all potential springboard for a German invasion of Turkey, the "land bridge" between Europe and the middle east.

Malta, under increasingly violent assault by German and Italian planes in recent weeks, would be a sharp thorn on the flank of any Axis drive into Turkey or across the Mediterranean to Egypt and the Levant states.

While the Mediterranean stir-

CHINESE INVADE THAILAND; JAVA FACING CRISIS

Japs Hold Off Attack From Sumatra; U. S. Pilots Bag Four Planes.

"New enemy air units are appearing over our lines, bombing our troops almost constantly," the communique said.

In the critical struggle for Burma, Domei news agency asserted that Japanese troops had crossed the strategic Bilin river where imperial British defenders two days ago took up new positions, and "are continuing their advance northward."

The zone of the river action was some 60 miles north of Moulmein, recently captured port on the Gulf of Martaban, the Japanese news agency said.

The invaders thus may be seeking contact with the Chinese divisions assigned by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to bolster Burma's divisions. Most of them are manning mountainous positions well above the position of the initial Japanese entry.

The railroad feeder line of the Burma road, Chinese war supply route, runs between Rangoon and Mandalay some 50 miles west of the Bilin river.

Dutch forces massed upon Java as a focal point of resistance against the southward drive of Japanese troops arrayed in Sumatra, Borneo and Celebes, neighboring islands of the Netherlands East Indies, and a spokesman voiced confidence.

"There are ample troops, the civilian population is prepared and everything is well organized," the Netherlands minister of foreign affairs, E. N. Van Kleffens, said in a Washington address last night.

He said, however, additional war supplies were needed for protection of the island of 40,000,000 population, political and economic heart of the archipelago and seat of the United Nations' Pacific high command.

"I am glad to say that part of the supply has arrived already," Van Kleffens went on, "but we can do with much more."

The minister declared that "the fall of Singapore certainly does not mean that Java will fall."

Domei, the Japanese news agency, said Japanese warships steamed into the captured British naval base yesterday after the approaches had been swept free of mines.

A body of picked troops was chosen to make a "formal entry" today.

Speculation over the possibility that German submarines may have a hidden base in the Caribbean arose in Balboa, Canal Zone, in the wake of raids Monday in which seven tankers were sunk or damaged and oil refineries of the Dutch West Indies islands of Curacao and Aruba were shelled.

Explosion of an 18-foot torpedo which had nosed harmlessly to an Aruba beach killed four Dutchmen and wounded three others while they were dismantling it yesterday. They were the first casualties of the war on American soil from hostile service operations.

Pour Cold Water On Jap Burma Claims

LONDON—(INS)—British authorities today poured cold water on a Japanese claim that Nipponese troops are now within 13 miles of Rangoon, capital of Burma and southern terminus of the strategic Burma road, supply route for transport of war supplies to China.

Likewise, it was stated, no fresh news had reached London to support other Jap claims of successes on the Burma front.

British authorities said the latest information shows that a "pause" on the Burma front still persists although local patrol encounters are continuing on a fairly large scale.

MacArthur Stalls Half Jap Power

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Gen Douglas MacArthur's epic stand in the Philippines is immobilizing half of the entire Japanese manpower spread over the Pacific battlefronts military experts estimated today.

With gaunt, unshaven and weary men still fighting like demons—the enemy's own tribute to their valor—MacArthur was described as waging one of the greatest rear-guard delaying battles in the history of warfare.

"When strategy on this far-flung Pacific battle-front is considered, as well as the hopes of the United Nations in defending their other Pacific bastions, it is ridiculous to speak of MacArthur's resistance as a 'useless fight,'" said a military official.

The Japanese, according to the best estimates available in Washington have between 400,000 and 450,000 men in action on the fronts stretching for more than 4,000 miles from the Philippines to the Indian ocean, but not including China.

More than 200,000 of these troops, including some of the best shock troops of the Japanese war machine, are in the Philippines, either facing MacArthur's defenders on Batan peninsula or policing Manila and the occupied areas.

than in the principal group of Chopin numbers. In the Fantasy-Impromptu (which many of the audience recognized as the source of the erstwhile popular song "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows") and in the Ballade in G minor, Brailowsky maintained an impeccable tempo through the rubato melodies, the spiderweb arpeggios, and the thundering octaves.

Although he played Chopin as a member of the school of interpreters introduced to America by the late Ignaz Jan Paderewski, last night's artist made the great French-Pole's music something of his own.

His performance was certainly in contrast to the composer's own notoriously delicate playing. The composer is reputed to have let the massing of chords, harmonies, and free contrapuntal effects produce the sense of power.

Brailowsky used physical power, even in the agile "Valse Brilliant" in E-flat major. He used it, certainly, in the left-hand octave passages of the Polonaise in A-flat major. But Brailowsky used power to advantage to build up overwhelming climaxes. And he showed his equal ability to produce a dream-like effect in the Nocturne in D-flat major.

The artist again combined a lightness of touch with a solemnity of interpretation in the Prelude in G major of Rachmaninoff with which he opened the third group of numbers. He made the piano thunder and tremble with exorcism in Manuel DeFalla's Ritual Fire Dance.

A precise sense of rhythm that permitted Brailowsky to insert recurrent dramatic pauses of exactly the same length appeared again in the Faure Impromptu in F minor.

Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 6, is essentially a tuneful showpiece. That, the way Brailowsky played it.

The first number, to this reviewer at least, was probably one of those things best forgiven in view of the general excellence of the rest of the concert. It was Vivaldi's Concerto in D minor, and while the artist at times achieved an organ-like effect with the use of the pedal many passages remained blurred and choked in a mass of unreleased sound.

If any other part of the concert needs adverse criticism it is probably the most familiar, the adagio from Beethoven's Sonata Opus 27, No. 2, with which the first portion of the program closed. Melodies, even those marked "adagio" in the scores, must not be permitted to fall on their faces whatever the beauty of the supporting accompaniment. Like a singer, the instrumentalist dare not dawdle and pause too obviously for breath. Not even Beethoven can stand that kind of reading, not even by one of the finest pianists of our time.

However, for the pleasing allegretto, Brailowsky deserved every plaudit he received. And in the presto agitato his performance was dazzling. There was almost unbelievable speed combined with accuracy and a preservation of tonal sense.

After the concert Brailowsky left for Cleveland to go to Harrisburg, Pa., where he will play his next concert. In the spring he will tour South America.

Of his audience last night the artist said:

"It was wonderful. Not a sound came from them to disturb me. I enjoyed playing for them."

The final concert of the Civic Music series will bring Giovanni Martinelli and Duselina Gianinni, Metropolitan Opera stars in joint recital March 24.

Prior to last night's concert, Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, president of the Civic Music association, announced that the 1942-43 membership drive will start April 20.

belonged as much to the city as to us. It was long a familiar landmark. We considered it a high honor and privilege to maintain the building as a symbol of the faith of our human kind in things unseen and eternal.

"This faith goes on, of course. The loss of the building is a challenge to us. The congregation will carry on as a unit, I think. The real things for which the church stands are still with us to guide and to uphold.

"We are thankful for what has been, for the sympathy and kindliness of the community in our present disaster, and for whatever of Christian service we may be called upon to render in the days to come."

Members of the church cabinet and several other members of the congregation assembled last evening at the home of Rev. Young. Following the meeting, it was announced the cabinet had accepted an invitation for the congregation to be guests at regular morning services in the First Presbyterian church next Sunday.

Also, Sunday school classes of the First Congregational church will be held at the regular time Sunday morning in the Y. W. C. A. building. United Lenten services, which were scheduled to be held in the First Congregational church, will be held instead in the First Presbyterian church tonight.

The cabinet appointed a three-member committee to look into the matter of a regular meeting place for the church congregation until permanent arrangements are made. This committee comprises Fred L. Tracy, chairman; Robert B. Black, and Mrs. C. W. Fox.

Also, the cabinet took steps toward having the fire-blackened walls torn down and the wreckage cleared away. The main church building was completely ruined but the walls of the small addition to the rear may be used after the church property has been roped off and this precaution will remain until work of clearing the area starts.

The cabinet will meet again at Rev. Young's home next Tuesday evening to plan further action.

The likelihood was seen today that cause of the fire may never be established. Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger said the blaze apparently started in the general vicinity of the church pipe organ and there was a possibility the fire may have been started by defective wiring in the organ. He pointed out, however, that it is exceedingly difficult to determine the exact cause when a fire so completely sweeps through a building.

Everything was in order when A. C. Heffellinger, church sexton, left the building at 11:20 Monday evening, Chief Seeburger said. The first alarm came at 4:02 a. m. Tuesday.

The ruins still were smouldering today. One line of fire hose was left at the scene for use in case of any flare-up of fire in the debris, and Seeberger made frequent visits to the scene.

There were many indications of the imprint that had been made on Mansfielders and residents of other cities by the imposing church, with its lofty spire rising 210 feet above the city.

Editors of several Ohio newspapers telephoned The News-Journal for information concerning the fire to supplement the stories carried by press associations. One editor commented that residents of his city knew the church well from driving through Mansfield.

Despite an extra run of several hundred copies, The News-Journal's supply of Tuesday's editions containing stories and photographs of the fire became exhausted early last evening as residents came in for extra copies to send former residents or friends who had visited in Mansfield and were familiar with the church.

Many purchasers of additional copies asked The News-Journal to mail the copies, and circulation employes of the newspaper were busy today mailing copies to points as far as California, Florida, New York, Washington, and to many boys in armed service in many states.

The fire was the worst in the city since the Memorial Opera House burned in December, 1929, with loss of $200,000, and was the third major fire here in a year. The others were the fire which swept the Home Materials lumberyard with a loss of $80,000, and the blaze which destroyed the clubhouse at Westbrook Country club with loss of $75,000.

red with new activity, bolstering forecasts that the middle east would become a major theater of the world-wide conflict this spring, Russia's armies surged ever deeper into the German winter defense lines.

Stockholm dispatches reported that a Soviet army corps, including six Polish divisions, had advanced to within 50 miles of old Poland on a drive "with gathering momentum" into the republic of White Russia.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters, vague as to details, claimed for the second successive day that German troops had cut off and "destroyed" Russian forces on the Moscow front and that "more than 1,000 enemy dead were left on the field of battle."

In North Africa British headquarters reported that British mobile columns pushed deep into the desert region west of Tobruk without encountering opposition.

Deny British Failed To Aid Americans

LONDON — A British spokesman said today that information the government had received from Malaya "did not confirm" criticism by Elliott H. Simpson, American importer, who said Americans were not considered in British evacuation plans at Penang.

"It would be a matter of deep regret," the spokesman said, "if there was any failure under the pressure of events to show all possible consideration to United States subjects at Penang at the time of the evacuation. "It would be realized that, circumstances being what they were, an inquiry would be quite impracticable."

Simpson arrived in Jersey City, New Jersey, last Friday from Singapore. He said he would report to the state department in Washington concerning alleged British negligence in arranging for the departure of civilians from Penang.

He declared the British ordered their own women and children to leave Penang but "never notified the Americans to leave." He said they heard of the withdrawal by accident and fled four days after British Nationals had left.

Much of the artillery has been moved into position since Dec. 7 over newly built or improved mountain roads.

Enemy landing vessels if they passed the navy, the bombers and the field of fire of the guns would then be met by fire from the pill boxes on the beaches—every beach on which a landing would be possible.

The pill boxes contain 37-millimeter (1½ inch) guns, manned by a few men who are ready to remain at their posts until the end, and who are eager for the day when they may have live targets at which to fire.

pose, but said he would not do so.

He added that he had recently been "blacked out" in a group picture taken by a News-Journal cameraman.

Apparently the picture referred to was made when the War Production board's army and navy trailers stopped here on a statewide tour, and Mayor Locke was one of a party of officials inspecting the trailers.

That picture appeared on Feb. 9, and the mayor was almost obscured by a navy officer standing in front of him. He was not "blacked out," however, and on the previous day, Sunday Feb. 8, the mayor was shown in the center of a group of civilian defense officials.

After the mayor had left the scene, Hamilton sought to induce him to pose, but the mayor steadfastly refused.

Later, in his office, the mayor said he knew of no new developments in the impasse between himself and Crafton. The mayor has insisted that Crafton has resigned verbally and that the resignation will take effect Feb. 28. Crafton maintains he has not resigned and expects to stay on the job unless given "official notice" that his term of office has been ended.

The mayor admitted today that he had given Crafton no such "official notice," and that he hadn't talked to Crafton, though the latter was in his own office only a few feet away. Crafton agreed that he and the mayor had not talked together today.

The visit to the city of a new Mack fire truck carrying a booster tank and pump capable of producing 750 gallons of water a minute was occasioned by the city's interest in adding to its fire protection.

A demonstration of the truck was given at the city building at 9 a. m. as the equipment was en route to St. Marys, O., where it will supplement the fire-fighting apparatus in that city.

It was inspected by city officials and members of the Citizens' fire committee in anticipation of fire equipment legislation that is expected to be introduced at the next council session.

What do I do?

Ease up on that "heavy foot" for long tire mileage!

The best way to explain what speed does to tires is this: At the Indianapolis Races a brand-new, specially built tire wears out in 500 miles! On the other hand, many motorists who drive at moderate speed get up to 50,000 miles from tires! You can get such mileage from your tires. If you check your speed, keep tires properly inflated and are careful not to injure the carcass, you'll be surprised how long they'll last.

CHAPTER VI

As Judith walked to the office the next morning she felt that people stared at her as if she wore her love for all to see. At the office she went directly to Giles Benson, the advertising manager, and asked for permission to take an early afternoon train to Clinton.

"Oh, sure," he said. In his look, too, she felt a searching scrutiny. When she had sent a telegram to her mother, she went to work with a speed and inspiration that surprised and amused her.

But Max was in her mind. Several times she had the frightening thought that she would never see him again and that last night had been both the beginning and the end. But it was this busy office with artists bent over their drawing boards and telephones ringing and people coming in and going out that made last night and Max and what they had said to each other and what she had felt slightly unreal.

Leaving the office at 2:30, she was on the train for Clinton at 3:30. And it was as if Max sat beside her, and she were taking him home with her.

Four hours later a taxi stopped on a tree-lined suburban street where large frame houses, painted every two years, sat back from spacious lawns now covered with multi-colored leaves. Home. Here she had been born and here she had grown up. On the cement path that led to the house she had tumbled more than once from her bicycle. Here a small girl had decided that the normal way of life was not enough, here she had dreamed of places and people outside her sheltered life. While the driver opened the door, she thought, "I was right. Everything I've done has been right for me. I must have a good fairy. Because all my steps have been steps toward Max."

Her mother opened the door. A small, pretty woman with an enviable complexion, a sweet expression and gray hair softly waved, Isobel Barth folded Judith in her arms and kissed her.

"How are you, dear?"

"I'm fine, darling. How are you? How is everybody? Aren't you and father going to Harriet's party?" Harriet was Judith's married sister.

"Of course not. It's for the young folks and you must hurry. Harriet and Larry have gone. They went early to receive their guests. The children are in bed."

"I'm not," said her father, Nicholas Barth, said, six feet two, and weighing 250 pounds. He came down stairs and kissed her loudly on the cheek. "You'll have to rush it. You're holding up the works. But don't wake the kids. I just got them to sleep and I've run out of stories. I'll take up your bag."

"But I haven't a gift for Harriet and Larry. I completely forgot . . ."

Her mother smiled. "She'll be tickled to death that you came home to her party. You can send her something next week. Now hurry . . . Larry's friend will be here any minute."

"Larry's friend?"

"Yes. To take you."

"Who is he?" It hadn't occurred to her she'd need an escort to a family party.

"What is his name, Nicholas?"

Her father laughed. "Darned if I know! Don't you know his name, Isobel? Well, we can't waste any more time. I'm glad Harriet doesn't have a wedding anniversary every week." A handsome, middle-aged man, he grinned at his younger daughter as they went up the steps together. Judith knew how happy he was when his family was under his roof. "What a to-do! Your mother was sewing on Harriet's dress as she went out the door and Larry has my new car. How's everything in New York?"

"Oh, fine. Phyllis was married last week, you know, and Emily is living with me now."

"Emily's the one I liked, isn't she? The one with the brown eyes?" Opening the door to what was still called "Judith's room" he put her bag inside. "Now remember, no noise. Those little imps are asleep down the hall."

She was smiling. "But if you can't remember the name of Larry's friend—"

"Leave it to me. Now go and make yourself beautiful. Oh, yes, the nameless young man sent you some flowers. Gardenias, I think. Your mother has them in the refrigerator. Anything you need?"

"Just time."

Her room. Nothing had been changed. Nothing ever changed here. The four-poster single mahogany bed with the white bedspread, the mahogany dresser that had belonged to her grandmother, the desk, the cretonne-covered chair, the scattered hooked rugs were the same. You did not want anything to change here, your home, your parents, your room.

She thought, "But why did Harriet pick a strange boy to take me tonight? Why not someone I know? I didn't know she and Larry met any new people. Probably someone from Larry's office. . . . Gardenias! The usual gardenias. Max would never send the usual gardenias . . . Max . . .

Twenty minutes later when she was wearing a bright green dinner frock and gold sandals, there was nothing in her appearance to indicate the haste with which she had dressed. But the excitement that was in her heart and fingertips was not for tonight, knowing well the provincial little country club and Harriet's friends who would sit in a semi-circle on the veranda, the girls talking about babies, the young men about politics. No, the excitement was in her heart and in her fingertips because Max had accelerated her life and she was impatient for this week-end to pass and for Tuesday to come.

Would it be like that in the future, her concentration upon a certain day of the week, the day's name touched with magic because Max had said it? Oh, the questions, the questions that could be answered only by living the answers.

When the bell rang, she picked up the long black velvet coat, put it over her arm and came out of her room.

In the downstairs hall she saw her mother and father with a tall, dark-haired young man faultlessly dressed in evening clothes.

"Here's Judith now," her mother said and looked up and smiled proudly.

"Fast worker," her father said, grinning.

Almost before she reached the last step she was being introduced to Stephen Larrabee who was tanned and rugged-looking with blue eyes almost too large and beautiful for a man with a friendly, boyish smile in which there was an unexpected shyness. Added to the hasty first impression was the fleeting thought that in a young man as good-looking and as magnificently built as Stephen Larrabee, "He's very nice."

There were no demands in his voice. Nor were the tones precise and clearly cut. Nor would you ever stop still to listen to it. No . . . It was just a nice, average masculine voice of a young man who carelessly blurred his words and who, despite the perfection of his appearance, was a little ill at ease to find himself in a strange house with strange people.

Not like Max, Judith thought. Max would not be ill at ease in rags in Buckingham Palace. And Stephen Larrabee obviously was making a great effort to be liked by the Barths, for he was the sort of person who could not bear to be disliked by anyone. Max was Max. Accept him or reject him, agree or disagree with him, he was still Max.

Though Stephen's look was not direct, she knew that a perspective, intelligent mind lay behind those large blue eyes. She knew, too, his youth and his social inexperience. You could well imagine Stephen's having been a beautiful baby, a Boy Scout, a high school and college athlete. You could well imagine his having a wholesome middle-class family, his brothers borrowing his ties and his mother worried over his diet. You knew, too, that he was careless neither in habits nor morals. He was a definite person with, in all probability, his future neatly charted.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1942.

The Beginning of Lent

THE LENTEN SEASON, which begins today and extends through March into early April, comes at a time when a war-torn and heart-sick world is beginning to better realize the need for divine guidance in carrying through the tasks that lie ahead—for America and for all peoples who believe that it is God's will that His children should have opportunity for freedom of thought and action, so that each may prepare, in his own way, for the future life which faith envisions.

To those of the Christian faith Lent serves as a period of meditation and its significance is eloquent of man's spiritual needs, in association with the physical and mental phases of earthly existence.

Lent, with its emphasis on the dark days in the life of Jesus, points the way to individual experience in self-denial, self-examination, humility, prayer, and re-awakening to religious obligations and privileges.

It also serves to strengthen bonds of friendship, fellowship and brotherhood, and to bring greater appreciation of the similar purposes of all religions founded on belief in God and designed for the betterment of mankind.

Mansfield churches, this week and through the succeeding weeks until Easter, offer opportunity for fitting observance of this lenten season, and there has never been a time, within the memory of living people, when need for a spiritual uplift has been greater than in these troublous days.

Must Report Sugar On Hand

PERSONS who have stored away in their homes more than enough sugar to meet current requirements need not fear making a report of the amount on hand, when the time comes for rationing—although they are now being asked to start using up this surplus instead of buying more.

The penalty is not for having sugar on hand now but for making a false statement in regard to the reserve supply—and more than two pounds per person, when the report is made, will be considered as "hoarded" and a corresponding number of stamps will be removed from the book at the time of registration.

The application, which is to be signed by one member of the family, carries a warning that false reports to any government agency subjects the person making the report to penalties under the United States criminal code which may run as high as $10,000 fine or 10 years' imprisonment.

Best procedure now is to use sugar that you already have, in excess of two pounds per person in the family, and to buy no more than enough to meet actual weekly needs hereafter.

Man Proposes, But God Disposes

WITH a calm confidence inspired by seventy years of experience in finding it there when needed, it was announced last Saturday that union lenten services of six Mansfield churches would be held this evening in the First Congregational church.

None could foresee interference with this plan, but today the planned meeting place is a mass of fire-swept wreckage and transfer of tonight's service has been made to the First Presbyterian church.

In times past it was custom for religious people to supplement any future plan or engagement by adding, "the Lord willing," and this is still understood, although seldom said.

Now, more than in normal times, the future is veiled in uncertainty, and the thought in many minds yesterday, as they viewed the smouldering ruins of what had been a magnificent church edifice, was that this scene of accidental destruction bore resemblance to the devastation being intentionally wrought in many cities over the world—and with the thought there was a prayer that Mansfield—and all of the Americas—may be spared the tragedy of enemy attack, in which incendiary bombs are used to start fires in many parts of a city, with all citizens on the alert to extinguish flames before they attain conflagration proportions.

Possibly a look at the ruins of the First Congregational church will bring to people of this community a keener realization of the realities of war in some of the stricken cities of Europe and the Far East.

Don't Give Wrong Impression

MAJOR GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT, war commentator, warns his fellow-Americans against letting an impression develop in Russia, China and the Dutch Indies that we want to run this war as an Anglo-American enterprise, in which we do the planning and our allies do the fighting and dying.

It would be very unfortunate if anything like that happened. And there is danger of such a mischievous impression spreading because Britain and America are, as yet, not ready for big and effective fighting, while the powers referred to are bearing a heavy burden, and holding the defenses of civilization for us as much as for themselves. Even when we are able to bring our full power to bear, it will be wise for us to play our part with becoming humility. We are not fighting alone.

Where 'Human Nature' Shows

THE INCOME TAXPAYER insisted that he had a good case for charging a $250 set of teeth to "business improvement," with corresponding deduction. But the internal revenue clerk wouldn't accept it. The teeth, it was insisted, were "personal advancement" and Uncle Sam wasn't going to pay the bill, or any part of it. The taxpayer had to accept the verdict.

The ingenuity and persistence being applied right now, by some Americans, in making a case for income tax deductions, would probably win the war.

But that isn't the whole story. Many cases are reported of taxpayers who refuse to take legitimate exemptions and insist on paying more than their share. And that, the clerks say, has never happened before.

Someone asks, "Whatever became of Lindbergh?"—and the answer is that he's keeping as quiet as he should have been before war was declared.

One advantage of war time is that more people are getting an opportunity to enjoy the widely heralded beauty of sunrise.

Siam has declared war on the United States—after all the worry we had over those Siamese twins.

BITTER DOSE, BUT IT MAY HELP

Choice of Personnel Criticised

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's announcement that she intends to resign from the office of Civilian Defense "as soon as its organization had been perfected" did not please any of her critics. Actually it was not any specific action by the First Lady—so far as the direction of these activities in which she was interested herself is concerned—that has drawn criticism. It is in the completion of the organization.

In plain English, it is the individuals foisted on various organizations and on the federal payroll through Mrs. Roosevelt's influence who are resented far more than any policies which the wife of the president advocates or puts into effect.

When the organization of the Office of Civilian Defense, therefore, is completed all the harm will have been done, as the critics of the First Lady see the picture. Now, no one, not even the bitterest critic of Mrs. Roosevelt, has ever accused her of being stupid. So there is little doubt that she realizes this perfectly. Hence she certainly must have had her tongue in her cheek when she told reporters in Ithaca that she would resign from the Office of Civilian Defense as soon as the "organization had been completed."

OBJECTION has been made again and again by her critics to the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt seemed to enthuse—to the extent of helping them to get federal jobs—only over Communists. It has been a matter of common gossip in Washington for many years that since the late Boies Penrose, Mrs. Roosevelt took more interest in obtaining jobs on the federal payroll than had anyone, with the possible exception of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

There are some who question this, saying that Jim Farley, as chairman of the Democratic national committee and postmaster-general, was too active in such patronage-seeking to be overlooked.

As a matter of fact both Penrose and Farley should be overlooked in such a comparison. The situations and motives have nothing whatever in common. The motives of both Penrose and Farley were obvious. Each was trying to perfect a political machine—Penrose the Republican organization of his day, and Farley the new Democratic machine he had built in the interest of F. D. R., and, perhaps, of Farley, though the last did not work out so well.

As it looks to friends of Representative Martin Dies, the object of Mrs. Roosevelt was to put Communists on guard in every possible spot on the federal payroll, with the minor reservation that if the particular protege of the moment were colored his or her economic views were not scrutinized.

THAT IS, of course, an ex-parte statement. But it indicates what criticism of the First Lady's activity through the government departments and agencies has been. Rightly or wrongly that is what they are saying. Whereas if there has been any criticism of her actions aside from the selection of personnel it has received little publicity.

So for Mrs. Roosevelt to resign after the "organization is completed" is—to her critics—like locking the stable door after the horses are stolen.

Editor News-Journal:

What's the matter with our city of Mansfield, to allow petty grievances to get ahead of our better judgment in these critical war times?

That was given as one of the reasons for what happened at Pearl Harbor. It's pretty near time we are getting behind the wheel and helping our president to win this war.

What would Mansfield do in case of an air raid? We would all just be paralyzed—and it could happen, like it has happened in many places. Singapore having been taken, they're getting closer every day. Are we still going to be "fiddling" while Rome burns?

Man About Manhattan

Actor and Man

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—If it were true that actors could not escape the psychological effect of roles involving infirmities of the body and mind, Carl Benton Reid would be a prime candidate for Bellevue's famed psychopathic ward.

But two seasons as Tallulah Bankhead's weak and mentally warped brother in "The Little Foxes," and his current assignment as a club-footed tyrant in the Theater Guild's "Papa Is All," have failed dismally to alter a disposition inclined naturally to sunniness and a fixed belief in the goodness of human nature.

AT GALLAGHERS, where we had ham and eggs, he looked no part of the domineering parent with the maimed foot who justifies the title, "Papa Is All."

"A friend of mine who's an orthopedic surgeon saw the show and came running back to tell me I would certainly do something harmful to myself if I didn't quit wearing that clubbed foot! I haven't noticed anything. Walter Huston wore a wooden leg in 'Knickerbocker Holliday' for months, and it didn't hurt him. Lon Chaney spent half his time trussed up as hunchbacks and freaks, and that didn't bother him. I can wear the club shoe all day, and never notice it."

Perhaps Mr. Reid is double-jointed. This shoe was built up four inches especially for the role. I watched him when he entered the restaurant, and he entered with the gait of a man used to swinging along dirt roads.

Indeed, rural tramps are nothing out of the ordinary for Actor Reid. He has a farm in Maine and on it is an old house with six fireplaces but no plumbing. That's being attended to now. The house was built in 1795, is on the outskirts of Ogonquit, some 10 or 12 miles from Kennybunkport, where Booth Tarkington, Kenneth Roberts, and others hold forth. There his summers are spent and there he will one day settle down to the comfortable chores of a gentleman farmer.

THIS newest play of Reid's repicts a pocket of American life little known to those outside of Pennsylvania. Its people are Mennonites. The men grow long beards and wear fork-pie hats. The women and even the little girls wear long, Puritan-like dresses, and they rigidly eschew the society of outsiders.

As the head of the family, Reid (Papa) is a landhungry despot whose wife and children live in mortal fear. He keeps his son and daughter literally chained to the land to insure their free labor. His warped intolerance and innate cruelty stems indisputably from the cripple's complex that has dogged him throughout his life.

Yet, despite going through this experience every night in the week and sometimes in the afternoon, Carl Benton Reid hasn't yet turned into a wife-beater.

Bonanza for Private Corporation Provided By Guayule Rubber Act

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Agricultural advisers are urging the president to veto the Guayule Rubber Act, just passed by congress, giving a lush rubber bonanza to the International Rubber company in Arizona and Southern California.

By this act the government would lease lands, materials, and guayule seedlings from the International Rubber company for $2,000,000 and at the end of 10 years would turn them back to the private company with all the improvements; and since it takes several years for rubber plants to develop, the government presumably would turn the rubber plantations back to the private company just about the time they become a thriving and profitable business.

Even the contracts for synthetic rubber factories, being built through Jesse Jones' loans, contain safeguards for the government's future property interests.

Most interesting thing about this Guayule act is that the bill as originally passed by the senate went quite far in safeguarding the public's interests. It provided that the government might "purchase" the land from the International Rubber company and thus not be under obligation to return it after 10 years of improvement.

The senate bill also provided that the government might acquire the property by condemnation instead of having a maximum figure of $2,000,000 fixed. The senate bill also provided that lands might be acquired in any part of the Western Hemisphere, thus letting Mexico in on the deal under the Good Neighbor policy—a country where guayule already grows. However, when certain southwest congressmen got through with the bill in the house, it was purged of all these protective provisions and confined the secretary of agriculture to leasing the land and relinquishing it after 10 years of improvement.

Note—During the final senate debate, Senator Downey of California stated that the emasculated house bill had been okayed by Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long. Other state department officials, it is known, did not agree with Long.

White House Barriers.

THE STREET which separates the White House from the treasury (East Executive avenue) is now blocked off on account of the war. Passing this barrier, a taxicab passenger remarked to the driver: "What's the matter? Don't they trust you cab drivers?"

"Oh yes, sir," replied the driver. "But they don't trust our passengers."

This particular passenger was William Vosmer, executive of Republic Steel corporation, now with the war production board.

Tom Dewey and USO.

MAIN reason for the resignation of Tom Dewey as national chairman of the United Service organization was that he wanted to throw his full energies into campaigning for the New York governorship. However, this isn't the whole story.

Inside fact is that Dewey has been fed up with the USO job for some time, tells friends that it might prove more a liability than a help in the gubernatorial campaign.

The New York racket-buster plans to make the governorship (if he wins) a springboard to the GOP presidential nomination in 1944, and the USO chairmanship seemed like an excellent publicity sideline when he first took over. However, it hasn't worked out that way.

The USO has failed somehow to catch the public fancy, though Dewey himself has done a remarkable job raising funds. To friends, Dewey has made no secret of his dissatisfaction.

Last fall Dewey furiously served notice on the Federal Works administration that he would demand an investigation if the FWA didn't expedite the building of recreational centers for service men. These centers are operated with USO funds and personnel.

Later the war department took charge of construction, and things began to move—but still not fast enough for Dewey. Recently he complained to intimates:

"I'm just about fed up with the whole business. I've gone out and raised 15 million dollars and we still have a lot of it in the treasury, where it's doing no good, simply because we haven't received the proper cooperation from government agencies. As head of the USO, I'd be in an embarrassing position if donors started asking questions about what happened to the money they contributed for the boys in uniform."

Peace In Uvalde.

JACK GARNER'S friends in Washington have received letters from him indicating that although the world may be shooting itself to bits, all is peace in the valley of Uvalde.

The man who a short time ago wielded the gavel over the most potent legislative body in the world has settled back comfortably in his Texas rocking chair. He is raising Bantam chickens and boasting that he has the best pecans and honey in the valley.

His annual deer and turkey hunt went off as usual, and Mrs. Garner, who always found time for needlework even in Washington, is knitting vigorously for soldiers.

But the former vice president does suffer some moments of nostalgia. He gets the Congressional Record every day, and when he reads the account of what the senate and house did, who spoke, and what they said, he feels a little homesick for the old life in Washington.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Answering the mail orders:

W. H. K., BUTE, Mont.—If you think Washington reporters (Mr. K. referred to the word-of-mouth kind as well as those who write for newspapers and magazines, and those who broadcast over radio) are exaggerating about the h.e.l. in Washington, let me tell you a little story.

I have a friend of moderate circumstances. He recently was transferred from New York City to Washington. In a month or so, there is going to be an addition to the family. In New York City, often referred to as the most expensive in the world, he had made all arrangements. In one of the finest hospitals, he had reserved a private room at $6 a day. His wife's physician had estimated an over-all charge of $150.

They started immediately to make arrangements here. The hospital: $7 a day for a private room PLUS $2 a day for the baby's "board and keep." They had to agree to stay at least two weeks, with a proviso that they would stay three if the physician thought more than 14 days were necessary. BUT, if crowded conditions in the hospitals become worse, it was to be understood that they were to move out within 12 days.

The obstetrician's fee: around $200 . . . provided of course, there are no serious complications.

I don't mean to say that this is the low price for bringing a baby into the world in Washington. It's far from the top price too.

F. A., JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Faulty vision isn't nearly as important as it used to be in the physical specifications for enlistment in the military forces. Neither the army nor navy would give me any definite information on your request. What they said might be summed up in the phrase: "It all depends." But not many days ago, the army was out with the proud announcement that: "Mobile optical units now accompany all armies in the field and spectacles are supplied to soldiers without cost."

B. L., HAMILTON, Ohio—I don't believe the police forces, city, state or national, are neglecting civilian crime in, as you say, carrying on a "witch hunt for saboteurs, fifth columnists and spies." The Federal Bureau of Investigation informed me that it is less than a month since they circularized thousands of police agencies that "crime among youth continued to be the most serious police problem of 1941." From reporting agencies came the startling facts that last year, 63 per cent of persons charged with burglary; 56 per cent of those charged with robbery; 75.5 per cent of those charged with auto theft (8,100 persons), were all under 21 years of age. There were 864 persons under voting age last year charged with murder. All of the figures are new records. The spies, saboteurs, etc., captured last year set new records too, but its a tiny handful compared to the growing problem of "criminal youth."

Timely Editorial

Eccentric Aviatrix.

What distinguished Laura Ingalls from patriotic isolationists was not her Anglophobia, for Anglophobia is a fairly common condition among Americans. Besides hating England, the eccentric aviatrix nursed a strange admiration for Hitler that she went about indiscriminately praising him. The doctor who lifted her face, for example, testified that his patient tried to convert him to Naziism.

Convicted as an unregistered, paid agent of Germany, the 45-year-old flier awaits sentence, which may be two years in prison and $1,000 fine. Hitler's hostility to the United States was acknowledged long before Dec. 7, so it is fair to say that Miss Ingalls' crime was akin to treason. The maximum penalty would not be too severe. Before sentence is passed, however, we hope the court will satisfy itself that the woman is wholly sane. There must be a screw loose in the mind of a woman who has had Miss Ingalls' opportunity to observe American life and yet is a disciple of Hitler—Akron Beacon-Journal.

A Farmer's Diary

The 'Funny Book'

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

OUR oldest boy brought home from school a gaudy magazine. The heads of all four brothers were bent above it.

"Where'd that come from?" I asked.

"A boy loaned it to me," he answered, flushing. "I couldn't look at it at school—she doesn't let us. Gee, it's exciting—spooky, too, in spots!"

"If it's like that, I mustn't miss it," said I. "When you're through, let me see it, will you?"

He brought it, and I saw that he had one of the cheapest most lurid pieces of blood and thunder that could be put into pictured form. I looked long enough to find superdevils, supernatural horrors, and volcanic villains on almost every page. Watching me, his face grew sober.

"What's wrong with it?" he wanted to know.

"What is? How did you like it?"

"It's—got something. When you start you can't quit till you finish it. Something worse happens on every page."

"What'd it cost?"

"A dime. Sometimes boys put their money together and buy one, then pass it around. This is the first one I was in on—they have to hide 'em from the teacher and the janitor. The superintendent won't give 'em back. He's got a big pile in the office—'for national defense,' he says. I don't think that's fair. Can't a fellow spend his own dime the way he pleases?"

"Certainly," said I. "But he ought to get his money's worth. We don't buy dirty vinegar made of wood shavings and acid—the pure food laws protect us. Not but what a person might use such vinegar for a while and still live through it.

"I guess a man might keep tasting tainted meat until, after a while, he'd have an appetite for carrion. But I'd hate to think of a carrion eater in our family!"

I wrinkled my nose in disgust, and the boys laughed.

"Is it that bad? Does it really stink?"

"Since you ask me, I think it's a cheap, dangerous swindle. Somebody is lining his own pockets by making fools of boys with dimes to spend. Look at those colors! Any fellow who'd had even one art lesson could do better. Look at the story—it's weird, crazy, and impossible. Not a normal character in it. Not even funny. I didn't hear you get one good laugh—you were just shocked. Why—when libraries are full of real stories—would a boy spend a dime and a whole hour of time on something like this?"

"It's so easy—all you do is look!"

But, son, some of us—even some quite young boys—can't help thinking! How does this yarn compare in your mind, with the story of David and Goliath? Or old Robinson Crusoe? Or even Penrod?"

He nodded and a twinkle was in his dark eyes. "Sure. Now if you'll give it back, Dad, I'll tell 'em all what you said. We had a bet. They thought you'd warm my pants for me."

KIWANIS CLUB TOLD OF PART CIVILIANS CAN PLAY IN WAR

GALION—Topic of discussion at the weekly Kiwanis club luncheon meeting, Tuesday, at Hotel Talbott, was the part of Kiwanis in the war.

G. A. Berting, sales manager of the North Electric Manufacturing company, addressed the club on Galion's part in Civilian Air Defense, and Merrit C. McElroy gave a report of a state meeting of Kiwanis in Columbus this week at which time International President Charles S. Donley of Pittsburgh, discussed Kiwanis' place in the war.

Berting explained that Civilian Air Defense would take over many of the duties in the United States which would relieve highly trained army and navy pilots for actual combat service. These duties, he said, include patrolling oil, gas and water lines, towing targets, ferrying airplanes and making speedy delivery of needed supplies and communications.

Galion now has 13 pilots available, and five planes, he explained. He said that the planes are now dismantled because no arrangements have been made to guard the local airport, as the government now demands.

McElroy reported that Donley said at the state meeting that the Kiwanis program in the war is to build civilian morale and to more fully develop the program which Kiwanis has been organized to carry out.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

"I'll rack my memory too," Olina said. "But I just can't materialize any memories of that song, other than it was one of the famous old songs we were supposed to know."

I paid a passing mental tribute to the thoroughness of European royal educations, and then, acting upon a second thought concerning the necessary warning to Mary of what I had said to Stephen Redfield, I turned to my desk and took up the envelope containing the carbon of the note I just had entrusted to Olina.

"I've changed my mind about putting this carbon in Mary's box at the hotel desk," I said. "It contains too much dynamite. I think I'll enlist your mother's aid instead."

Olga Ready to Help.

"You won't have to work very hard to do that," Olga's daughter said with a smile. "I can't imagine anything Mama would like better than to have a finger in this pie."

Despite the difference in their education and training, Olina's fondness for American idioms and slang always reminds me irresistibly of Katie's penchant for picking up every odd phrase she hears.

I suppose something of my thought was reflected in my telltale face, for Olina suddenly flushed and her eyes were faintly apologetic.

"I'm afraid I'm getting to be too much of an American as far as slang and idioms are concerned," she said. I gave her shoulder a reproving little tap, and said:

"Don't stop. Keep it up. It's most fetching, and really inflates our egos. You know that hoary old platitude about imitation being the sincerest flattery?"

Olina Amused.

Her eyes cleared and she gave an amused chuckle.

"You ought to be flattered all over the lot, then," she said. "But don't tell Mama about it. She likes me to be an American, but she doesn't quite cotton to the slang part. But I forget; I must be keeping you. Shall we go to Mama now?"

"If you please," I said, and we walked into my bedroom. But with my hand on the panel of the camouflaged door I stopped and turned to her with a question.

"Has your mother seen this letter and picture?" I asked.

"No," she answered. "I told her about them, but I haven't had a chance to show them to her yet."

"Do you mind if I do?"

Olina Praises Olga.

"No, indeed," she answered. "Why should I? And Mama will get a great kick out of them, I'm sure. You know, for all her dignity and stand-offishness, Mama is a thundering good sport."

"I've known that for a long time," I told her. But when I put my hand on the door again it was she who stopped me.

"Aunt Madge," she said, and hesitated.

"Yes, go on," I encouraged her.

"You won't know me when you talk to Mama about that letter and picture, will you?"

"Indeed no," I reassured her. "In fact I would rather you weren't around; I'd like to concentrate on your mother."

Something intangible, elusive, flashed into her eyes.

"You think Mama might figure out a clue to that picture?" she asked.

I was thinking just that, but I had no intention of saying so to Olina.

"Each person who sees it will wish to do that," I said a bit evasively.

Noel Not to See Painting.

"Is there anybody else who, you think, ought to see it?" she asked next.

"My father, my husband and Mary," I answered promptly. "Do you mind?"

"Not in the least," she said, adding thoughtfully, "Mary ought to be interested in it. But I don't believe it would do Noel—or Mary either—any good if he should see it."

There was an intonation in her voice which made me shoot a swift but furtive glance at her. Was she keeping to herself a conjecture about this letter which she was not yet ready to voice or believe? And did it concern Noel and Mary?

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BID THE HIGHEST FIRST

With two five-card lengths in your hand in touching suits — spades and hearts, hearts and diamonds or diamonds and clubs—an opening bid should always be on the higher-ranking one. That is just as true if the higher is topped only by the 6-spot and the other is the five honors as when the difference in strength is less emphatic. If you start them in reverse order, you may not be able to find a good second bid at all, if it comes around to you again, and even if you do, you can never give your partner a true picture of your distribution, to land you in the right contract.

	♠ A 8 5 ♥ A K 8 ♦ 4 ♣ J 9 8 7 5 4
♠ Q 9 6 2 ♥ J 10 3 ♦ K 10 8 ♣ K 6 3	N. W. E. S.	♠ J 10 7 4 ♥ 3 ♦ Q 4 ♣ Q 10
	♠ K ♥ 9 7 6 5 2 ♦ A Q 7 6 5 ♣ A 2

(Dealer. South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	4 ♥

How much better bidding that was than at the duplicate table where South opened with 1-Diamond. North there got fancy by bidding 2-No Trumps. South didn't like this, but finally decided to bid 3-Hearts. This sounded to North like a four-card suit, coming after the initially-shown diamonds, so he bid 3-No Trumps. A spade lead doomed that contract. North had to lose two tricks before he could build up nine, whereupon the three setting spade tricks were taken.

Where hearts were bid first, South easily showed his five-five lengths with the rebid of diamonds, so North made the proper choice. Only two tricks were lost there, a diamond and a heart. Even with careless play, only three could be lost.

The important thing, in getting into the correct suit, is the number of separate pieces of cardboard your side holds in that suit, so that the opponents will be out of trumps while your side still has protection. Hence the order of your suit bids should be that which gives your partner correct information on that point, if you are strong enough to make the bids which will accomplish that important purpose.

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is the sounded bidding of this deal, in rubber or duplicate bridge?

POSTPONE MEETING.

Utilian club meeting which was scheduled to be held on Friday, Feb. 20, has been postponed until March 6. Mrs. Foster Riss will entertain at her home on Wood street.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, February 19.

A lively and progressive day with the sudden development of surprising or unforeseen angles, is read from the predominant astral figures. While there may be a certain security in property or other organized interests, yet this unusual situation may give concern and calls for much restraint, deliberation and acumen in order to maintain the ground gained. Irascibility, erratic or intense words and deeds might prove disastrous. However the accent on the day's lively doings may be social, domestic or affectional, with keen enjoyment.

Those whose birthday it is are promised a lively and enterprising year with all manner of affairs stepped up to high and perhaps thrilling tempo. In business the progressive and news plans and ideas call for some safeguarding as sudden and surprising situations may arise to challenge good judgment and sagacious action. Elders as well as strangers seem to figure in the perplexing circumstances in which irritability, rashness or excitable decisions might be fatal to promising conditions. However the major interest, if countered on domestic, social or affectional associations, may bring felicity.

A child born on this day should have much inventive ability and ingenuity for creating novelties in things as well as ideas. It will be fond of adventure and change; at the same time it will be gentle, loving and gracious.

TOURIST CLUB HEARS INTERESTING TALKS

Mrs. S. D. Hoover Gives Talk On Great American Painters at Meeting Tuesday: Sculptors Discussed By Mrs. A. C. Tuttle.

TOURIST club members heard two interesting and informative talks on American painters and sculptors at their meeting Tuesday at the Women's Club when Mrs. W. L. Parkinson was hostess. Mrs. S. D. Hoover opened the program giving a detailed talk on "Our Great American Painters" who came to this country from Europe in the 17th century and painted the early settlers.

John Smibert painted the portrait of "Bishop Berkley and his Family" which is now in the possession of Yale university. Benjamin West was a noted English painter having studied in England and Italy. John S. Copley, an American, is noted for his portraits of colonial dignitaries and their wives. He also painted "Death of Lord Chatham," said to be the greatest historical painting ever done in England.

Charles Willson Peale was the last and said to be the greatest of colonial craftsmen and painters. John Trumbull is known for his pictures of battles, having painted a picture of "Battle of Bunker Hill." Gilbert Stuart is known for his universally accepted portrait of George Washington which is now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. James Whistler is noted for the "Portrait of his Mother," the only American painting ever placed in the Louvre in Paris. Other famed painters were Thomas Sully, Homer, Cole, Leutze and Inness.

"Our Great American Sculptors" was the title of the talk given by Mrs. A. C. Tuttle. She told the club that the first sculpturing in this country was done of the mast heads of boats. Sculptors of this day acquired their skill abroad. John Quniey Adams Ward of Urbana is noted for the figure of the "Indian Hunter" in Central Park in New York City. Augustus Saint-Gaudens is noted for his work on the Lincoln Monument in Lincoln park, Chicago, Ill.

Paul Wayland Bartlett is known for his work on the rotunda of the Library of Congress in Washington, D. C., and also his work on the monument of Lafayette which was given to France in return for the Statue of Liberty. Borglum is noted for sculpturing of busts of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt which are on Mt. Rushmore in the Black Hills. Two noted women sculptors are Janet Scudder and Melvina Hofman. Mrs. Tuttle discussed the lives and works of many other sculptors and displayed pictures of them. The next meeting of the club will be held March 3 at the home of Mrs. O. L. Seybold, 524 South Main street.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—The escape of the German fleet to the Helgoland bight wasn't just a playful little game of hide-and-seek.

When it was nicely bottled up on the French coast, Britain at least knew where it was and could and should have ridden herd on it without tying down too much of her dwindling navy. Now it is like some nameless terror in the dark. The British, and perhaps we, will have to weaken their naval strength in many places to seek, find and destroy it and prevent some new and hideous raiding and surprise attack anywhere on the earth's surface.

Gen. Johnson.

Furthermore, after what happened at Pearl Harbor, and to the Normandie right under our noses—anything may happen.

There are at least three great French capital ships and many lesser crafts. The Italian navy may not be so hot, but it has a good deal of modern tonnage.

It is not impossible that these remnants might be gathered to make a formidable high seas fight and what is not impossible to happen these days may happen.

The British naval problem is completely changed by Singapore. The long route around Africa is, as Mr. Churchill says, the only way left open to them to the Far East. If we are to send a great A. E. F. to New Zealand and Australia that is the route we must take.

With all our shipping for either navy or mercantile marine there is not enough tonnage in sight or building to ship, supply or convoy a great army.

People talk of our carrying on the fight in the Far East. Few stop to ask "Why?" or "With what?" How much of our navy was crippled at Pearl Harbor and how long will it be before we can repair and use it? What is the actual state of the British battleship fleet which should have blocked the Straits of Dover for the German escape?

People are asking such questions. They are no longer satisfied with the answers they get. They have a right not to be satisfied, because so many of those answers have proved misleading or downright untrue.

Mr. Churchill tells them Singapore will stand—and it falls. Secretary Knox tells them our navy is ready and the next day—Pearl Harbor, with the truth not yet available.

In the meantime, the bedlam of confusion, incompetence and waste at Washington re-echoes throughout the land. There is a constant jealous grabbing for power and the foundations of power seem to be the multiplication of inexperienced personnel to do the work by many that could be done by few. Its superstructure is the attempt by each bureaucratic chieftain to duplicate or displace something that is being done by another. Why? Because it improves the resulting work? No, because it inflates the stature of the successful power-grabber.

Take the question of deferment for the draft on account of employment in a necessary industry. This is now being done, as in the World war I by the local draft boards—committees of the registrants' neighbors directed generally from Washington but as well divorced from politics and aware of each man's circumstances as such boards could be.

Well, under the guise of having a "labor supply" administration, direction of this function of the draft, after a bitter battle among the secretary of labor, Mr. McNutt, Sidney Hillman and several others, has been won by Hillman.

This was simply a struggle for power. It is just an instance of what is happening in several places. It is why things don't get done. It leads to a conviction that is sweeping this country—that the truth is not being told and that, if it were told, it would be almost too nauseating to suffer.

French Officials Face 'Betrayal' Trial

CHARGES U. S. WITHHOLDING PENSION FUND

State Auditor Says 3 Million Held Up By Federal Social Security Board.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson asserted today that "it is apparent" that the federal social security board is withholding its one-half share of Ohio old age pensions for the first quarter of 1942.

Ferguson said the money was being held up "for some reason, probably because of non-compliance with the federal statutes by the Ohio division of aid for the aged under the jurisdiction of Gov. John W. Bricker."

Governor Bricker asserted he knew nothing about withholding of funds and "as governor, I think I surely should know if there is anything to it."

Ferguson obtained nominating petitions this week for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, asserting "I'll put Governor Bricker out of the statehouse." Bricker is a Republican.

Ferguson said approximately $3,310,000 would be taken from the state's general revenue fund to pay the federal government's share of old age pensions for January and February and that the amount might be lost entirely if the social security board refuses to reimburse the state.

In October, 1938, the federal government withheld $1,335,691 from the state's old age pension system during an administrative controversy with former Gov. Martin L. Davey.

H. D. Defenbacher, state finance director, declared that a technicality had delayed the federal payments for this quarter but that "it is nothing serious."

"The social security board first must approve the changes made in the Ohio old age pension system by the last legislature," Defenbacher said.

"The amendments were made at the request of the federal government and representatives of the social security board helped draft and approve the new Ohio plan to make it conform with changes in the federal law. We were merely delayed in submitting our formal report of the revision for the board's approval."

Mansfield police are trying to figure out how a woman's purse could be stolen from a Park avenue west home shortly before midnight one night and then be found in a bathroom cabinet in a West Fourth street home the next noon. A Park avenue west woman reported to police late Saturday that a purse and contents valued at $2.50 had been stolen from her home. At noon yesterday, a Fourth street resident called from his rooming house and told police that he had found a purse stuffed into the cabinet of the bathroom. The contents were missing but it was the same purse and police are still puzzled about the case.

Richland county draft boards were busy exchanging registration cards today and the clerks of the three boards found they had registered men from nearly every section of the United States. Scores of men who are working here temporarily or were just going through the city on the registration days signed up with the boards here. Clerks said it was probable that they will begin receiving cards for Richland countians who registered at other points. The cards in every case must be returned to the board in the registrant's home district.

A father and his son will be enlisted into the U. S. navy from the Mansfield recruiting office next Wednesday when Carl C. Ward, 38, and Robert G. Ward, 19, both of Ashland R. D. 3, leave Mansfield by bus for Cleveland. W. G. Cox, Mansfield recruiting officer, said that both men had applied for enlistment at the same time and that both appeared able to pass physical examinations. The father will enlist as a second class petty officer while the son signs as an apprentice seaman.

The trials and tribulations of moving were experienced by the Girl Scout executive office workers yesterday when headquarters was moved from the Farmers' bank building to the Roth building almost directly across the street. Scouts of Troop 14 had to decide where the furniture would be placed, since it is their duty to decorate the new rooms, telephones had to be installed and numerous other details given attention.

FIVE HELD IN GLOOMY RIOM PRISON TODAY

Daladier, Blum, Gamelin, and La Chambre Charged With Country's Downfall.

RIOM, France — Five men charged by the Vichy government with "betrayal of duties or charge" in plunging France into the greatest war in history move into gloomy Riom prison today while the old town's church bells signal the advent of Ash Wednesday and the Lenten season.

Tomorrow the five, headed by Edouard Daladier, premier when war was declared, will walk through an ancient passage to the palace of justice where they will face their prosecutors and the judges who will decide whether they are guilty of causing their country's downfall.

The special supreme court of justice picked to try the case has spent 17 months in preparation. There will be seven judges, three alternates and three prosecutors. The men in the dock will be:

Daladier—war premier accused by Vichy of failure to consult with the superior war council; with permitting delivery of arms needed in France to Spain during the civil war; with failure to deal adequately with subversive activities before and during the war; neglect of mobilization of military and industrial forces for war.

Leon Blum—premier in 1936, charged with having created class struggle and social disorders.

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin—supreme allied commander until Dunkirk. Accused of failure to obtain sufficient arms and the solidification of the frontier.

Guy La Chambre—air minister under Daladier. He went to America when France fell but returned to stand trial. Accused of gross neglect in his failure to provide adequate aviation for the war needs.

Pierre Jacomet—general secretary of Daladier's war ministry. Charged with failure to provide the necessary war materials for the war.

A sixth defendant, Pierre Cot, who was air minister under Blum, will be tried in absentia. He fled to America and refused to return. The charge against him is failure to properly build up the aviation branch of the army.

This is the setting that has brought hundreds of newspapermen, (mostly Germans), officials and the curious into this musty little town of 11,000. There is a carnival air in the crowded markets and the jammed corridors of the too few hotels that hardly is in keeping with the staid history of a town famed since the ninth century as a center of law and justice.

The extreme penalty will be confinement in a fortress for life or deportation, possibly to the Sudan desert area. Capital punishment, once possible in such cases, was outlawed more than 50 years ago. There will be no appeal from the judgment, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who ordered the trials, has decreed.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

C'est L'amour!

LOVE, as the poet says, makes the world go 'round—and it makes Broadway go 'round, too, so if you are in a mood to think that a lace-edged Valentine or a candy heart is a silly fripery with no place in this era of bombers and tanks and bad news, think again. Because true love never did anything more destructive than break a heart on a spring evening, and it's nice in the middle of winter and the middle of war—to have a day devoted to pretty verse and pink sentiment and cinnamon kisses.

Kilgallen

So, as Mary Livingston would put it, welcome St. Valentine Day, and welcome Eros! Even in times like these, there's always room for one more kiss.

How does Cupid do on Broadway? He does great. You might say it was his favorite haunt, because at heart he's a stage door Johnny.

Look at Benny Fields hugging his wife, Blossom Seeley, out to take a bow with him after all these years. That's love . . . Look at Eddie Cantor and his Ida and look back a little sadly at Al Jolson and his Ruby . . . Love is the great denominator. It brings two generations together, as in the case of Georgie Jessel and Lois Andrews! . . . It causes stars to quit the spotlight for awhile, as in the case of Ethel Merman.

This is the street that can be lit by its own torchlight, but it loves love, anyway. Why, it's love of the theater that has kept Broadway going. That and, I must admit, love of the dollar.

Love is everywhere in this town. It flows from the pen of a chorus girl at the Imperial theater writing to her sweetheart at Fort Dix . . . It strains and slaves in the tenements and it laughs in luxury on Park avenue . . . On this island in the same night you see a Macy clerk kissing his girl goodnight outside her apartment house on West 80th street and a top-hatter Croesus embracing his beautiful doll before sending her home in a cab to Flushing, Long Island.

You see the sailors and their girls arm in arm on Broadway, and the soldiers and their girls cheek to cheek in the movie balconies.

Cupid is firing arrows at Uncle Sam himself these days—and on every arrow is clipped a defense bond. John Public's loving Valentine to the country he loves to death. Love is behind all the sacrifices that war uncovers. Just as it was Clark Gable climbing that mountain to get to her, so it was Carole Lombard ballyhooing for her country. It's every last performer getting out and giving all, visiting the camps, appearing at benefits, selling stamps. It's girls in uniform and girls in trousers and girls with white starched caps on their heard going off to far away countries.

EXPECT 300 AT FARM SESSION

AAA Protest Organization To Hold State Meeting In Mansfield Friday.

Nearly 300 Ohio farmers are expected to attend a state meeting of the Ohio Marketing Quota Protest association Friday afternoon and evening in Mansfield, R. R. Fawcett, secretary-treasurer of the association, said today.

The session will get under way at 1 p. m. in Radio City hall on North Walnut street. The meeting was called by the association's state executive committee.

Speakers will be Russell T. Kiko of Canton, state chairman of the organization; William Lemke, former North Dakota congressman and chief legal counsel for the association, and Edward E. Kennedy, Washington, D. C., business and legislative counsel.

They will give a picture of the organization and legislative work of the association since it was set up at a meeting in Mansfield last summer.

Working to abolish the government wheat marketing quotas and the tax on excess wheat marketed by farmers, the association has filed court actions in Richland county and other sections of Ohio, obtaining restraining orders to halt collection of the tax.

A temporary injunction was granted several weeks ago by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston in Mansfield. The court action here later was transferred to the federal district court.

TALKS TONIGHT

Horticulturist To Discuss Victory Gardens.

Because of the government emphasis on Victory gardens this year the Mansfield Garden Center invites the public to hear Joseph H. Boyd, extension horticulturist of Ohio State university, speak tonight at the library building.

Boyd, whose appearance here was arranged by George B. Ganyard, Richland county agricultural extension agent, will speak on defense gardens and give garden-growers valuable suggestions on the cultivation of their vegetable plots.

For the past seven years Boyd has worked with vegetable-growers throughout the state of Ohio in his capacity as extension horticulturist at the university. Prior to that time he was extension agent in Hamilton county for several years.

CORPS DOUBLES ITS MEMBERSHIP

The Red Cross Women's motor corps that has doubled its membership since organization last fall started last night on the final step of its training that includes the study of county road maps, lessons in safe driving and a 10-hour motor mechanics course.

Both the county highway department and the state highway patrol will aid in the training of the final course that will be taken by approximately 30 members. The class originally had an enrollment of 16 at the time of the first aid course was started. Since then the membership has been bolstered by other women who had completed first aid work in other classes.

Carl Slough, assistant county road superintendent, gave the corps its first lesson in studying road maps at the home of Mrs. O. D. Fair, 309 Park avenue west, last night.

CHARGES LADIES IN UNIFORM GIVE SOLDIERS 'THE HEEBIES'

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD — Private Fred A. Banker, first class, of Battery A, Third Coast artillery, Fort MacArthur, Calif., started a one-soldier campaign today against ladies striding around in unpressed khaki uniforms and giving fighting men like himself the heebies.

All he did was write a note to the post newspaper suggesting that there be more form in the female uniform. Lieut. David Bramson, the editor, took up the cudgels against females in khaki and cited Miss Olivia de Havilland as an example. In a uniform, he said, she looks like a boy. In a dress, he added gallantly, she is the epitome of feminine charm.

"These women have no right to do this to us," continued the lieutenant. "We wear the pants well enough."

By that time Private Banker's complaint had trickled into Hollywood, where such ladies as Ida Lupino, Carole Landis, Kay Francis, Constance Bennett, Myrna Loy and Jeanette MacDonald wear some of the most magnificent uniforms seen this side of Herman Goering. Some of the uniform wearers were incensed.

And some others, like Dorothy Lamour and Paulette Goddard, said they sympathized with Private Banker. They said they, too, had shuddered at the sight of square-beamed ladies in olive drab.

Miss de Havilland reported she was a non-combatant. Said she never had worn a uniform except once when the New York office of her studio asked her to pose in one. She added that she was glad the army liked her in a dress.

Miss Lamour, who sold $25,000,000 worth of defense bonds on her recent tour, said she had functioned without benefit of chevrons.

"And I think I did just as much good in my own clothes," said she.

Sport Podge

Drawings for the Sandusky class A district high school basketball tournament will be made Saturday at 10 a. m. in the office of Erie County Common Pleas Judge Savord.

There will be no meeting of tourney school representatives at the drawing, it having been generally agreed that the trip of high school coaches for the mere matter of drawing numbers out of a hat was an unnecessary waste of rationed automobile tires.

Originally it had been planned to let State High School Athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend do the drawing, but Townsend turned the job back to the tourney officials.

New interest in the tourney for fans of Mansfield and vicinity will be the entry this year of Madison high school, moving up from Class B ranks for the first time.

Luck of the draw could very easily pit Mansfield and Madison against each other in the tournament lists, which would make a long trip to decide a neighborhood argument.

"It's too bad we couldn't play in the county tournament again this year," says Madison Superintendent Olan LaRue, "I think we might have done some good there. But we're not banking on doing too much good at Sandusky."

Comes an invitation today for the old Podger to make a speech at the annual banquet of the Lexington Gun club Friday night.

So sorry. That's the night of the Mansfield-Massillon basketball game at the high school. I couldn't pass that up, even for the privilege of getting a red face and stammering a few words for the entertainment of the Lexington marksmen.

Mansfield's Tygers can expect plenty of competition from the Massillon Tigers Friday night. Coach Bud Houghton has Joe DeMando, Mickey McDade, Buttermore and Williams back from last year's good Massillon team, while Harrison, Bray and Weisgaber also help to give the Tigers a formidable scoring outfit.

Grid Coach Paul Snyder scouted Massillon last week when the Tigers rode rough shod over Akron East 56-35. Buttermore got 13 points, Williams 10 and McDade 9 in that melee.

Coach Vern Hoffman is experimenting this week with a new combination which sends Joe Romano to Ken Krupp's guard position, leaving Bob Wirthgler at forward. "Joe and Windy may be playing every position on the floor, however," Hoffman says.

* * *

The Tyger reserves will have to shift their lineup around for Friday's problem too. Russ McBride, guard, has the measles, and probably is out of action for the rest of the season. Hoffman had been planning to move him up to the first squad for the Sandusky joust.

Congregationals Take Cage Tilt

Despite the fact that their church was burned to the ground the Congregationals downed St Paul's 29-25, yesterday in Y M C. A Church league basketball. Other winners were Grace Episcopal which tripped St Luke's, 28-18, and the Baptists who down the Lutherans 19-17.

Hipp of St Paul's was high point man for the evening with 14 points scored on six baskets and two free throws.

Mansfield Relays Abandoned for 1942

Ban On Interstate Competition Hits Nation's Best Track Meet

no out-of-state school could compete in Mansfield and still observe the North Central ruling.

The North Central association virtually controls the academic standards of its members, and can render worthless, if it so desires, the credits of any student attending a school from which its approval has been withdrawn. Such a student could not gain admission to a college belonging to the association on the basis of his high school credits.

Decision to call off the meet was reached principally on the basis that the attendance of out-of-state schools was the one feature that made the Mansfield Relays distinctive, and the competition tougher than that in the various state meets.

While a copy of the North Central ruling had been in the files of Principal Jesse Beer at Mansfield high school since early last summer, the ruling wasn't brought to the attention of the high school athletic department until last week.

"I attended the session of principals at Chicago last March when the ruling was adopted, but I was working on another committee, and was not active in the passage of this rule," Beer said today.

"When I received a copy of the rule two months after the meeting, I told some of the people at the high school that the North Central association had barred interstate high school contests of various kinds. But I was under the impression that the rule regarding athletic contests was not to be put in force yet, so I didn't take it up with the athletic department at the school," Beer explained.

Principal C. J. W. Luttrell of Lorain, who succeeded Beer as chairman of the Ohio Principals' committee, told The News-Journal today that the state committee, which is responsible for compliance, had no choice but to enforce the ban against inter-state competition in the Mansfield Relays.

"I'm sorry to hear that the Relays has been abandoned, but I know a lot of school principals who would have objected to competition in an inter-state meet, and I know that Lorain would not have competed," he declared.

"The North Central association probably would do no more than issue a warning to schools participating in such a meet," Luttrell said, "but it could take away accredited rating of such schools

H. W. Arlin, president of the Mansfield board of education, who attended yesterday's meeting, declared today: "We felt that if the Mansfield Relays were to degenerate into merely another state track meet, we would no longer be interested in conducting the meet. We considered that there were enough state meets now at Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio State university, Newark and other places and we didn't care to compete with these small meets.

It's too bad that we weren't informed of the North Central ruling before last week when it was called to Mehock's attention by H. R. Townsend, state high school athletic commissioner," Arlin said.

"We had already ordered 100 belt buckles as individual trophies for the Relays, and we are now informed that it will cost us about $70 to cancel the order, or $50 more to change work on the trophies in order to make some use of them

"We may go through with purchase of the buckles and give them as prizes for a Mansfield scholastic meet, which could be held under the lights at Stadium field in a big community athletic show comparable to the physical education demonstration conducted by Mehock last spring," Arlin indicated.

"While other factors entered into our decision to abandon the Relays, the North Central ruling was the principal cause of our action," he explained.

Mehock had obtained sanction for the Relays by Townsend as state athletic commissioner, and from the National Federation of High School Athletic associations

George Smith had been appointed manager for this year's Relays, and plans for continuation of the meet were in full swing when Townsend's letter last week tossed a bombshell into the situation

Townsend's letter to Mehock said.

"I have just had an inquiry from Principal C J. W. Luttrell, Lorain, which I will quote:

'I have been asked by principals about the Mansfield Relays this year. I have been informed that the invitation does not specifically state that only Ohio high schools will participate. I don't see how North Central association high schools in Ohio can participate without violating the new Criterion 10-b, if schools from other states participate. Perhaps I have received the wrong information about invitations from Mansfield going to schools outside the state.'

As a matter of fact, invitations had been extended to teams outside the state, and a number of West Virginia and Pennsylvania schools had announced intention of attending the Mansfield meet.

Criterion 10-b states,

'The program of pupil and school activities is such as to meet the interests and needs of the pupils and of the community and is so planned as to contribute most effectively to the educational program.

"To the end that all activities of the high school shall contribute most effectively to the educational program, a secondary school which is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools shall not participate in any district, state, interstate, or regional athletic, music, commercial, speech or other contests or tournaments involving the participation of more than two schools, except those approved by the state committee, or by that organization recognized by the state committee as constituting the highest authority for the regulation and control of such activities."

Although the criterion itself does not specify any particular distance schools may send students in inter-state competition, the 75-mile limit was set up by the Ohio Principals committee.

School Superintendent W. L. Miller told members of the citizens committee yesterday that he had known of the ban on interstate competition in music, debate and similar subjects, but that the fact that the ban also effected athletic competition was not called to his attention until last week.

Because of the fact that plans were already under way, and trophies ordered, Mehock attempted, in telephone conversations with Luttrell, to obtain permission to conduct the Relays just one more year under the old plan, but the permission was denied.

Luttrell succeeded Mansfield's Jesse Beer as president of the Ohio Principals association.

"We've had the best high school track meet in the country for years. We're not interested in having just the best meet in the state," Mehock declared today.

Names of record holders in the Mansfield Relays, and the meet records themselves bear out Mehock's contention that the Mansfield meet was the best in the country.

Chief holder of Mansfield records is Olympic Champion Jesse Owens, who set Relays records in 1933 in the 100 yard dash in 9.6 seconds, in the 220 yard dash in 21.2 seconds, and in the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet, 3 inches.

Kenneth O'Rourke, of Warren, O., now a star track athlete at Notre Dame, set the Mansfield record of six feet 5½ inches in the high jump in 1938.

Bob Wright, great Ohio State hurdler from Huntington, W. Va., set a Mansfield mark of 25.3 seconds in the 220 yard low hurdles, and of 15 seconds in the 120 yard high hurdles in 1938. Johnson, of Poland, O., another Ohio State star, tossed the discus 152 feet, 3 inches for a Mansfield record in 1939.

And Bob Shaw of Fremont, star football and basketball player at Ohio State, put the shot 54 feet for a Mansfield record in 1940.

Mansfield's own John Linta soared to a pole vault record of 13 feet, 5¼ inches in 1939. All through the lists, Mansfield records compare with national high school records, and in some instances are better than the Ohio high school state meet records.

Wins Playoff

CHICK HARBERT

When anyone beats Ben Hogan, the tough Texan, in a golf playoff, it's worthy of note. Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., pro, did just that to the game's leading money winner in the Texas Open championship at San Antonio. Harbert shot a 72 to Hogan's 76 in the playoff.

START LISTING OF PROPERTY FOR TAXATION

Auditor, Deputies on Hand To Assist Persons In Making Out Returns.

Listing of personal property for taxation this year was under way today at the county auditor's office where listings may be made without penalty until April 1.

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe or his deputies will assist any property holder in filling out his tax blanks at the courthouse, the auditor said.

Two types of personal property must be listed for taxation. One, classed as tangible property, includes manufacturing machinery, equipment, inventories and credits, farm animals, farm equipment and produce, and office furniture and equipment, inventories and credits of business and professional people.

Taxable intangible property includes income from stocks, bonds, notes, land contracts, matured insurance policies, and annuities and trust funds.

Certain personal belongings and earnings are exempt from county taxes. They include furniture and household goods, automobiles, jewelry, government bonds and bank stock, rents, salaries, wages, and income from personal and professional services.

Ownership of property on Jan. 1, 1942, determines whether it must be listed for taxation this year. Tax is computed according to the general property tax rate of the district in which the property is located.

Tax blanks are available at the county auditor's office at the courthouse, or the auditor will mail blanks anywhere on request. When returns are filed by mail they should be accompanied by a check or money order for at least half the amount of the year's tax, made payable to the county treasurer and mailed to the county auditor.

THEATERS

Newspaper Story.

A much sought-after girl newspaper colmunist on international affairs learns that two can play the same game in "Woman of the Year," the Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn vehicle, showing at the Ohio. When she surrounds herself with foreign-speaking politicoes to the exclusion of her brand new husband the latter, a sports-writer, calls in some prize-fighting and cafe cronies to furnish some fun and gets it. The picture, held over through Friday, also features Fay Bainter.

Lively Comedy.

When a race-track bookie inherits an art gallery and gangland decides to get "culture," there's fun aplenty in "A Gentleman at Heart," opening today at the Madison. Featuring Cesar Romero and Carole Landis in the romantic leads and Milton Berle in the role of the bookie the cast also includes J. Carrol Naish, Rose Hobart and Richard Derr. Charles Ruggles and Charlotte Greenwood are starred in the second attraction, "The Perfect Snob," revolving around the efforts of a young lady to win a wealthy husband.

Cagney Film.

James Cagney in "Something to Sing About," the Ritz feature, has Mona Barrie, William Frawley, and Harry Barris. "40,000 Horsemen," showing the Anzacs in action, is the second picture.

Crime Picture.

"A Tragedy at Midnight," featuring John Howard and Margaret Lindsay at the Park, deals with a young married couple whose wit and good humor see them through a succession of perilous situations. Howard plays a crime detective who rouses the ire of the police department by solving crimes before the police do. Roscoe Karnes, Keye Luke and Lilliand Bond are in the cast. "Jesse James at Bay," starring Roy Rogers is the second attraction.

2—Card of Thanks

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

STOCK MARKET AGAIN HIT BY GLOOMY NEWS

Leaders Edge Downward as Adverse War Tide Halts Speculative Action.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Gloomy war news continued as a barrier to stock market improvement today and most leaders edged into slightly lower territory.

Lacking resiliency were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Case, Caterpillar, United Aircraft, Western Union, American Can, Kennecott, American Smelting, Southern Railway and Chesapeake & Ohio. Allied Chemical recorded a new low for the last year.

Chrysler was a firm spot, picking up a major fraction. Also resistant were Pennsylvania, Santa Fe and Boeing.

The adverse tide of the war in the southwest Pacific again controlled speculative motives to a large extent and brokers suggested the market needed some good news as a starting point for recovery.

Boardroom discussion centered on the cut in the Chrysler Corp. dividend to $1 a share from the $1.50 quarterly paid in 1941, as announced after the close yesterday. Last year's profits were more than $2 000,000 greater than in 1940 but the company explained that conversion of its facilities to war production and increased tax burdens necessitated conservation of cash to build up working capital.

The county boards had previously registered more than 10,000 men between the ages of 21 and 35 and added approximately 5,000 more during the third registration last week-end

The new registration in Ohio added 463 531 more men to the lists to bring the total to 1,361,425. County totals ranged from 536 in Vinton county to 86,393 in Cuyahoga county in the third registration.

The new men will receive their order numbers about the middle of March when the government holds another lottery to determine the order in which the registrants will receive their questionnaires and called for service.

After the draft boards send out the questionnaires to new registrants they will mail vocational questionnaires to all men not called for military duty. They will determine principally the non-military skill of men.

The 1942 plates, which will be white with green numerals, will cost the same as last year's licenses. Price of the plates will be determined by the horsepower of the automobile.

Licenses for cars with a rating up to 25 horsepower will cost $7. For cars between 25 and 31 horsepower the license will be $10, and for more than 31-horsepower engines the cost will be $16.

The new plates will be sold during the month of March by registrars in all parts of the county, and all automobiles and trucks in operation after April must have 1942 plates New plates may be used after March 1 this year instead of March 10

Jack Berger deputy registrar in Mansfield attended today's session in Ashland with several other registrars from Richland county villages. Other counties represented were Ashland, Erie, Huron, Lorain, Wayne, Crawford, and Medina.

Inmate Who Fasts 27 Days to Get Sanity Hearing

DAYTON — (U P) — Weakened seriously by a 27-day fast, Ralph Bowser who claims to live on spiritual nourishment from God will be taken into probate court today for a sanity hearing.

If committed to a mental hospital, Bowser likely will undergo forced feeding to restore his strength, authorities said.

He has lost 21 pounds of the 151 he weighed on Jan. 30, nine days after his self-imposed fast began in the county jail.

Bowser has been in the city workhouse for the past two weeks to finish a six-month sentence for refusing to send his two children to public school

Two psychiatrists who examined Bowser yesterday advised city physician George Gohn that in their opinion Bowser is mentally ill

The wife of the 42-year-old truck driver has been under observation at the Dayton State-hospital for some time. Dr. E. L. Hooper, hospital superintendent, said that if a patient refuses to eat, "the method of feeding is determined by the patient's physical condition as revealed in an examination."

Authorities believe that removal of Bowser from the workhouse would break the fast of Sherman Hypes, a fellow prisoner serving a term for keeping pigs in a residential district at Pyrmont Hypes, a convert of Bowser, has not eaten for 20 days.
